The History

It's only thirty miles northwest of Palm Beach, but in spirit and setting it's light years away, a one-street town in the heart of citrus and cattle country. Settled by the Seminole Indians early in the nineteenth century, the dry lands of the area they found ideal for hunting and camping are just fourteen miles south of the site of the last battle of the Seminole War, the last major Indian engagement east of the Mississippi.

White settlers followed in the 1890's and during World War I the Corps of Engineers dug the St. Lucie Canal running from Lake Okeechobee through the town to the east coast; but it was not until the arrival of Baltimore banker S. Davies Warfield in the 1920's that Indiantown was put on the map.

Warfield planned to make Indiantown the southern headquarters of his Seaboard Airline Railroad (now known as Seaboard Coastline), then stretching from Central Florida to West Palm Beach. He planned a model city. He laid out streets, built a school, constructed houses, and a railroad station. Of course he also built the Seminole Inn, which he envisioned as a focal point for his newly created community.

Wallis Warfield, his niece, who was later to become the Duchess of Windsor, was there for the gala opening of the Inn, and later visited the Inn several times.

The twilight grandeur of the "Old South" is captured as you enter through grand double french doors into the main lobby. Adorned with its open fireplace graciously framed with winding staircases to the sitting room above, the nostalgia of an era gone by sweeps over visitors. A glance through the area reveals the original solid brass wall fixtures and bronze chandeliers molded to the crest of royalty. The pecky cypress ceiling and hardwood floors which Mr. Warfield specified in the original plans highlight the room with a grace and style which cannot be described with words.

There's a mystique that remains unique to the Seminole Inn as its' pleasant surroundings bring back a sense of an Old Florida that only a special few get to experience again.

Swamp Tours

From October through May, we invite you to "tromp the swamp". Take a guided tour - free of charge - to observe the exclusive, natural beauty of the Barley Barber Swamp. All groups are accompanied by a tour guide along our 5,800 foot, closed-loop boardwalk. Individual tours are by reservation only and must be made online at www.SeminoleInn.com.

For those who are "Inn" to resting, stroll in our cultivated butterfly garden or relax at our pool and deck area.

Last but not least, an old favorite - PORCH ROCKING. No reservations required. Experienced porch rockers only.

Restaurant Information

Silence befalls those who enter the Dining Room for the first time. The Palladium windows sweeping from hardwood floor to the 12-foot pecky cypress ceiling create an atmosphere of unique beauty returning from the past. The massive 20 inch thick walls remind visitors that over 70 years have passed since people first enjoyed elegant dining in this room. With service and quality as the primary focus of the Seminole Restaurant staff it is no wonder the Restaurant has been acclaimed statewide.
